

Providence Primary Care offers care to Medicare patients and Direct primary care subscribers. Direct primary care (DPC) is a healthcare business model in which patients purchase a membership that allows them access to essential primary care services. The patient pays a monthly fee to the medical office, and can then access care as needed, without co-pays.

Providence Primary Care monthly membership fees includes in-person or virtual office visits (and eligible home/mobile visits), text/phone consultations with the medical provider, wellness visits, health portal access, and exclusive invitations to healthcare meetings and events. Additional services such as minor office procedures, point of care labs (urinalysis, for example), and weight loss programs, are offered at an additional fee at the time of service.

Non-members $200 per encounter. On a case by case basis, determined by the provider.
